The Universities Association for Lifelong

Learning (UALL) is the professional association for the lifelong learning community within higher education.

UALL plays a leading role in national and international policy formulation, advocacy, research and practice in lifelong learning and continuing education.

It has well-established links with all major agencies in lifelong learning and higher education including Funding Councils, UK Government Education and Lifelong Learning Departments, University and College Associations, Quality Assurance Bodies, as well as with other national and international organisations.

Membership is drawn from the higher education and lifelong learning sectors in the United Kingdom and overseas.
